

questions worth asking

A celebration of local storytelling

Tuesday 15th September 2015 at 8pm
in the marquee on Speen Playing Field

Jem Symondson chairs Questions Worth Asking - a new event for Speen Festival 2015 produced by Ian Warr - featuring a series of local speakers who are on a mission to tell some surprising stories. In just five minutes, participants are challenged to deliver a barn-storming speech offering new perspectives from people who live right on your doorstep.

The speakers

- * Entrepreneur Steve Andrews frequently travels to Africa and asks "can I re-write a bit of history?"
- * Architectural student Clem Blakemore is coming to the end of her studies and asks "what is the role of an architect?"
- * Budding standup Elliot Wengler ponders life as a twenty-something and asks "what does your generation have against mine?"
- * Rosemary Speight looks back on a lifetime of work and asks: "Where does satisfaction lie?"
- * Charlie Brocklehurst is the power behind many big local developments, such as the Eden Centre, and asks "what's next for High Wycombe?"
- * Finally, trumpeting mega-star Johnny Thirkell asks "do you need talent to make a No. 1 hit?"

Join an evening of fun, eye-opening storytelling that will also include panel discussions and questions from the floor.

Tickets now available from speenfestival.org and Speen Stores